NUMB. 584

SATURDAY, MAY 7. 1737. N°. 582.

To the DAILY GAZETTEER.

SIR,

AMONG the many Crimes laid to the Charge of the Miniſtry, that of undermining our Liberties, has been often hinted at, and many Steps pointed out as leading (imperceptibly indeed, till their deep Wiſdom diſcover'd them) to that grand Ultimatum of the PROJECTOR's Schemes.

NOT to enter into a detail of the Particulars, which have been ſo frequently ſtated on one Side, and confuted, or at leaſt anſwered, on the other, I ſhall obſerve, that as there is no greater Mark of the Freedom of any Nation, than that Liberty which every Subject has of ſpeaking his Mind freely, againſt any Meaſure, foreign or domeſtick, which he may think wrong, and this either in private Converſation, or in Print; ſo thoſe who abuſe that LIBERTY of the Subject, give the greateſt Shock that can poſſibly be given to LIBERTY ITSELF, by ſhewing how much the ABUSE of it, might make a RESTRAINT neceſſary.

IF we look at a neighbouring Nation, we may ſee diſguiſed Informers, in almoſt every publick Place, with blank Lettres de Cachet ready to fill up with the Names of ſuch, as dare barely inquire, in a Manner different from the Senſe of the Court, into the State of Affairs, and a Baſtille always open to receive them. Go a little further, and croſs either Ridge of Mountains: A Holy Inquiſition, and the Gallies, offer their Service to the State, as well as to Religion. God forbid we ſhould ever ſee, in England, any thing like this: But let not Gentlemen abuſe the Lenity of Power, becauſe they know it will not hurt them. 'Tis like talking Obſcenity to a Woman, who will not defend herſelf and MUST hear it. But, were the Provocation ſtill greater, as I hope and am confident the Miniſtry will never ſilence them by any Act of Power, their Behaviour becomes, by that very Moderation, ſo much the more unjuſtifiable, and ungenerous.

I do not mean theſe Obſervations againſt a Liberty of publickly reaſoning on Affairs, or canvaſſing a Miniſter's Conduct, which would look like reſtraining the Liberty of the Preſs; but ſure no Argument whatever, can be alledged to ſupport the bringing of POLITICKS on the STAGE. When the Pulpit aſſumed a Right of preaching Politicks to the People, what a Confuſion was the Nation thrown into! How high was Party carried! It was thought proper, from the ill Effects of ſuch publick Declaimers, to Government in general, to baniſh it from the Pulpit: Once a Year, a Liberty is ſtill reſerved to them, of Party-preaching; and to that Liberty, in good Meaſure, may, perhaps, be aſcribed the Continuance of a difference of Sentiments on a Tranſaction, which otherwiſe would only have been remembered as a Fact in Hiſtory, and not partially felt by any.

THE ELECTION, (a Comedy in Paſquin) laid the Foundation for introducing POLITICKS on the Stage; but as the Author was general in his Satyr, and expoſed with Wit and Humour, the Practices of Elections, without coming ſo near, as to point any Perſon our, he was not then guilty of the Fault he has ſince committed; tho' I cannot think him Praiſeworthy, for turning into Ridicule and making ſlight of one of the greateſt Evils our Conſtitution is ſubject to: 'Twas as ill judged, as the late Mr. Gay's turning Highwaymen, Pickpockets, and Whores, into Heroes and Heroines, which (tho' done with all the Wit and Humour, conceiveable in Man) ſerved only to increaſe the Number of thoſe corrupt Wretches, who encouraged one another, from the Example of the Stage, which expoſed with Wit, what ought to be puniſhed with Rigour.

THE great Succeſs which Paſquin had, encouraged the Author to give his Genius unlimited Scope, in this Vein; in which it has been made evident ſince, he was ſecretly buoy'd up, by ſome of the greateſt Wits and fineſt Gentlemen of the Age, who letting their Paſſions get the Better of their more mature Reflections, have patronized a Method of Writing, themſelves, were they in the Adminiſtration, would be the firſt to diſcountenance.

THE HISTORICAL REGISTER then, appeared to the Town, under the Patronage of the Great, the Senſible, and the Witty, in the Oppoſition, and contains a Hiſtory of the Tranſactions of the Year 1736.

THIS witty Writer, in order to inſinuate Ignorance in the Miniſtry, and want of Intelligence of the Affairs of other Nations, and to ſhew, that nothing has been produced in that Year, makes the Troubles in Corſica, the only known Tranſaction. Now tho' there is ſomething moſt ridiculouſly pleaſant, and apt to excite Laughter, in this Conception, yet to make it genuine Humour, no Event of Conſequence ought really to have been brought about in that Year; whereas, perhaps, Events, as great as any recorded in Hiſtory, have come to a definitive CRISIS in it. We have ſeen a War terminated, and Three PRINCES eſtabliſhed in DOMINIONS, the Diſcuſſion of whoſe Rights finally, by the Lex ultima Regum, had, perhaps, been attended with all the Fatalities that accompany the moſt obſtinate and bloody War. The ſettling the Intereſts of a Twice King of Poland, a Duke of Lorain, and an Infant of Spain, are EPOCHAS, that hereafter may be thought very Conſiderable in Hiſtory.

I have mentioned this, only to ſhew that the very Point, on which the greateſt Streſs of the Humour lies, is founded on a Falſhood; and I would from hence infer, how much it is in the Power of ſuch Exhibitions, to make a Miniſter appear ridiculous to a People; and if the Humour ſpreads, as poſſibly it may, and ſhould take in Home-Affairs, how much and how unjuſtly he might be expoſed to publick Reſentment, from ſuch humourous and poetical Colouring of Things.

IT may be ſaid here, in favour of the Author, that in the Cloſe of his Regiſter, he has treated the PATRIOTS no better than the POLITICIANS: But this, inſtead of extenuating only doubles his Crime, for, I think, to turn Patriotiſm, the nobleſt of Characters, into a Jeſt, equally blameable, and that neither ſhould have any Place on the Stage. But perhaps theſe Patriots have conſented to have themſelves play'd, only to exhibit that IMPUDENT FELLOW, who can ſtand their HISSES, and laugh in his Sleeve at them.

THE Auri ſacra fames, from which the Poet, no more than the private Man is exempt, had been ſo plentifully gratify'd by the Succeſs of theſe two Pieces, that the Author (ſince he had gone ſo far with Impunity) was reſolved to try his Vein further, and in EURYDICE hiſs'd, very impudently compares Government to a Farce, and carries the Allegory throughout. (I ſhall not perſue him in his particular Satyr, it not being to my immediate Purpoſe.) Now to inſinuate to the Vulgar, who muſt ever be led, that all Government is but a Farce (perhaps a damned one too) is juſt as bad to Society, as it would be to tell the People, that their Religion is a Jake. There are Things which, from the Good they diſpenſe, ought to be Sacred; ſuch are Government and Religion. No Society can ſubſiſt without 'em: To turn either into Ridicule, is to unlooſe the fundamental Pillars of Society, and ſhake it from its Baſis.

IF it be ſaid here, that it is not comparing Government in general to a Farce, but only the preſent Managers, to Farce-Actors, I would then ask the high Patronizers of this new Method, what Good they propoſe to the State from encouraging ſuch Licenciouſneſs? Will the expoſing the Miniſtry before the Eyes of the REPRESENTATIVES of all the Princes in EUROPE, give their Maſters a higher Idea of the Court of England? Will it give Us a greater Weight Abroad? Is it then, the Part of a true Patriot, one actuated by the Love of his Country, to ſpread its Weakneſs thro' all the foreign Courts, by publickly favouring ſuch ridiculous Repreſentations of its Government? I talk upon their own Principles, and ſuppoſe the abſurd Charge on the Miniſtry true. No true Patriot would endeavour to render his Country contemptible: He would rather ſtrive to hide its Weakneſs. He would try at a Cure, but by ſuch Means as would not lay the Wound too open

THE Stage has a large Field in the Follies, Vices, and Paſſions of Mankind. It has nothing to do with POLITICKS or RELIGION. The Preſs is open to detect any Impoſition from either of theſe, without the Help of the Stage; and as it has ſuch Liberty, it does not uſe it ſparingly, but lays on Miniſters moſt abundantly.

TO encourage theſe Politicks on the Stage, is not only unjuſt in itſelf, and improper, but of a moſt pernicious Tendency to the Stage itſelf, which inſtead of being a general Mirrour, where the Beauties and Deformities of human Nature are repreſented Impartially; whence we either copy or reject, as we find our Reſemblance good or bad, becomes a private Looking-Glaſs, where Spleen, Reſentment, and inconſiderate Levity, diſplays Objects without any Regard to Truth, Decency, Good Manners, or true Judgment. If ſuch Attempts are ſuffered to go on, and Poets tolerated to purſue ſuch unpoetick Licence, the very Gentlemen themſelves, who now perſonally ſupport it, tho' perhaps, in their own Minds they can't juſtify their Conduct in ſo doing, may themſelves, in proceſs of Time, be the Objects of ſuch Exhibitions, and afford themſelves as publick Spectacles of Deriſion on a Stage to the loweſt of Mankind. And whom then can they blame? For the VERY POET that now proſtitutes the Muſes to their private Paſſions, may ſerve thoſe of a future Oppoſition to a future Miniſtry.

Quam Necis Artifices, arte perire, ſua.

I am, SIR,

An ADVENTURER in POLITICKS.

Yeſterday arrived a Mail from Holland.

THERE are publiſh'd at Vienna, Copies of a Third Letter from the Grand Vizier to the Count de Konigſegg, Preſident of the Council of War, in Anſwer to that which his Excellency wrote to him on the 2d of March laſt. 'The Vizier having there-'in highly extoll'd the Pacifick Sentiments which 'the Count de Konigſegg manifeſts in his Letter, as 'well on the Part of the Emperor as the Czarina, 'proteſts that the Sublime Porte is equally as deſirous 'as either of them, to ſee the Peace reſtor'd with 'Ruſſia, and continu'd with the Roman Empire; 'and that therefore it conſents to the ſending of its 'Plenipotentiaries forthwith, for promoting the ef-'fectual Succeſs of this great and wholeſome Work, 'in Conjunction with the Plenipotentiaries of the 'other Powers that are concerned: That the Sub-'lime Porte conſents, that it be eſtabliſh'd as a Pre-'liminary Propoſition and Foundation of the Nego-'ciation, That nothing ſhall be done contrary to the 'Glory and Honour of the Ottoman Empire, as the Count 'Konigſegg expreſſes himſelf on this Head in his 'Letter to the Grand Vizier: That, conſequently, 'the Plenipotentiaries of the Porte had Orders to ſet 'out, together with Dahlman, the Imperial Ambaſ-'ſador, after the Feſtival of the Little Bairam in the 'Beginning of April, and that he hop'd they would 'be at the Place of Congreſs by the Middle of that 'Month.

As there is no Mention in the ſaid Letter, of the Reſignation of Aſoph, we muſt ſtay for another Anſwer from the Grand Vizier, to the Letter which the Count de Konigſegg wrote to him about the End of March, before we can be certain whether or no there will be a War. Mean Time all the Emperor's Generals were to be at their Poſts before the 9th Inſtant, O. S. And the Troops which are aſſembled in Hungary, have Orders to divide themſelves into five Bodies, who are to open the Campaign in five Places at once. According to a Liſt given of all the Imperial Forces that are to ſerve in that Country, they will amount to 216 Squadrons, 75 Batallions, and 59 Companies of Grenadiers. 'Tis ſaid, the Expences already incurr'd by the Emperor for this Army, amount to about 6 Millions of Florins: And as 'tis a Queſtion with ſome, whether the Emperor will concern himſelf in the Negociations for a Peace between Ruſſia and the Porte, unleſs the Grand Seignior will engage to indemnify the Charges he has been at for Opening the Campaign; and as 'tis leſs probable that the Turks will ſcruple to co-with this Demand, 'tis not difficult to foreſee that a War will be unavoidable.

The Letters from Vienna ſay, That one of the Emperor's Miniſters has declar'd to the Dutch Envoy Extraordinary Bruyninx, that the General Treaty betwixt his Majeſty and the French King, is drawn up; and that as ſoon as 'tis ſigned, it ſhould be communicated to the Maritime Powers, in the ſame Manner as the Preliminaries of the Peace were.
